

COOPERATION BRINGS CONTEST SUCCESS

Preference Vote Issue Starts

NEXT COUNT OF BALLOTS ON SATURDAY

Bulletin Contest Workers and Organization Members are Working Together, for Trips and for the Piano.

Perhaps you have thought the travel part of the Bulletin expansion year contest showed evidence enough of popular interest, but today when the great double prize vote issue began it was like the excited ending of some of the former contests.

Organization and individual trip workers have been coming all morning and more are expected this afternoon. One whole week was allowed the different contestants to explain the new vote issue plan to their organization friends and their efforts were not in vain judging from the inflow of subscriptions and the outpour of votes.

Want Piano.

Definite, determined intention was evident with the organization workers who are having their first introduction to this year's contest. "We want that piano," said several of them at different times during the day, with very little difference in the phrasing of their statement.

Other organization workers are not appearing at the office at all, but are transacting all the contest business through some active candidate who has already learned all the ropes while they continue the canvass for more subscriptions.

Surprises in Store.

The contest of cooperation will bring many surprises. Just because some leading candidate is helping some particular organization do not believe that organization has a claim on the piano prize. There are no clinches in contests until the votes are all in and the past standing of any of the candidates does not in any manner affect totals of piano votes.

Really Two Contests.

The piano contest is really a separate and distinct one from the trip contest. The only connection being that the Bulletin is conducting both, and that assures you of a fair count and awarding of prizes. True the votes for both individual and organization are issued together and at the same time but it is a double contest, or two different ones just as you like it, because there are two distinct sets of prizes; trips for individuals, and the other prizes for organizations.

It Doesn't Matter.

But distinct, different, double or all the same contest, does not materially matter. That which does though, is that organization and individual candidates work together. When one gets votes so does the other. That's why you want to combine your efforts. Do it before someone else makes the connection that you have intended to make all during the past week. Right now you want to make a showing for your organization. The next count will be made on Saturday and the results published Monday. Show that you can get a bunch of votes in such a short time. It will interest the lukewarm members in your organization and help to put them in the field as active vote hunters.

Action, a first showing, cooperation and hustle, are the immediate contest necessities.

THE OLD ORDER PASSETH.

The old and dilapidated stone fence that has done valiant duty in restraining the view from the outside of the Central Grammar school grounds will be torn down. The city fathers have had the matter under advisement for some weeks and the decision is forthcoming that the wall must go with the march of improvement for Emma street. The work will begin with the approval of the Superintendent of Public Works.

Franklin Pauline Werner is the leader of a movement in Germany to require all girls to do compulsory domestic service for a term of years, just as the young men have to do compulsory military service.

MURRAY JOLTS UNITED MANOA

Residents of Manoa valley came into town last night and they made their presence felt at a gathering of supervisors.

Manoaites are united in the declaration that they dwell in the most beautiful suburb within the boundaries of the city of Honolulu. They were equally free to confess that it was a solid front that was presented until Chairman Harry Murray fired a return shot into the camp of Manoaites.

Between thirty and forty property owners and residents of that district appeared before the City and County fathers in verbal protest concerning the state of Manoa thoroughfares. It was a solid front that was presented until Chairman Harry Murray fired a return shot into the camp of Manoaites.

"If the gentlemen from Manoa will simply get together, and give us a list of streets in their district that need the early attention of the street department, I believe that we can arrange for immediate relief," replied Murray to the call for assistance.

One member of the delegation jumped to his feet and intimated that there was not a street in the Manoa valley plat but was in more need of attention. "If you want a list of streets, we will present you with a city map," was the rejoinder. Murray attempted to point out the utility of the city government being able to convert all Manoa valley streets into hard surfaced boulevards at a moment's notice. He asked the several spokesmen in the party to arrange a list of those streets most in need of attention.

It was then that dissonance appeared in the ranks of the Manoaites. About every man present apparently resented on a street other than his neighbor. Of course his was the worst off. There were some who favored the first work being done on the main arteries leading into the valley. Others insisted that the side streets should receive initial attention at the hands of the road gangs.

Supervisor Dwight and chairman of the road committee appeared a target for the shafts of irony from several Manoaites.

Dwight denied the allegations that Manoa had been entirely neglected in the matter of road repairing. He insisted that at least five men had been employed in that district for some weeks.

Murray believed that the proper way to indicate how the fourteen thousand dollars appropriated each month for maintaining Honolulu road department was being spent would be to furnish an itemized expense account.

Low, who developed into a real out and out insurgent, was a mark for some sarcasm coming from Murray. Low attempted to appease the delegation from Manoa by telling them that he was satisfied that the City and County could well afford to spend several hundred dollars each month in that district if they only would get down to business and do so.

This free and easy banter of paraffin was too much for Murray who arose and declared that if Low as chairman of the ways and means committee would give some indication that the money was in sight, Manoa roads might be paved with asphalt or precious metal as far as he was concerned.

An hour was spent in a presentation of the needs of the district. A score took a shot at the subject dear to the heart of the Manoaites who has for these many years cruised in seas of liquid mud at those periods of the seasons when liquid sun or moon beams are a reigning attraction in the upper valley. One brave defender of his rights offered to take any member of the board by the hand and lead him over the treacherous and mirey roads the first rainy night. Others told of ruts in the roads which would require a two foot rule to scale. Gutters choked with weeds and refuse were described and while all present were ready to raise the right hand and swear that the conditions existing there were the worst ever.

When it came to a question of who should first receive the benefits from the hand of a paternal city road department—well, that was entirely another matter—and each and every property owner seemed to believe that his street was much more in need of improvement than that of his neighbor.

In the course of the evening, several residents expressed themselves as agreeable to maintaining the sidewalks and keeping the gutters free from weeds at their own expense.

Deputy Attorney Milverton was appealed to for advice as to whether this cost could be rightfully assessed the property owner. In reply he cited the fate of the bill introduced in the legislature that called for the carrying on street improvement by local assessment.

Supervisor Low is said to have been responsible for the invasion of Manoaites at the city hall last evening. Low is said to have been in view the gathering of hosts from Kalia at a future meeting of the board.

The supervisor is of the opinion that a living petition can beat one that has been typewritten bearing the signatures of property owners and that can be chucked into a pigeon hole upon its receipt by the supervisors. It was a far more difficult matter to get rid of or forget one likened to that brought before the City and County fathers last night.

Promises for speedy attention by road gangs were made. The Manoaites left apparently satisfied. Those present included: Messrs. von Damm, Gilmore, De Forest, Clark, Fred L. Waldron, Guild, Schmidt, Mays, Beadle, Johnson, Nowell, Byron Clark, Bowen, McKenzie, Perkins, Merle Johnson, Ross, Myatt, Beardmore, Sharp, Reidford, Hons, Krauss, Lyon, Merrill, Frazier, J. T. Gulick.
